"I. f. 1. Henricus Huntendunensis de Gestis Anglorum.

2 - 1 - — What may be considered the Second Edition; ending 1147. He afterwards continued it to 1154. It seems a fair copy, and has the titles of the Chapters prefixed to each book, which are wanting in the printed copy: but it omits the account of the Crusade.

II. f. 76. Hen. Huntendunensis de Contemptu Mundi.

III. f. 81. Leges S. Edwardi. (Hoveden, fol. 342. Wilkins, 197. Some part of Wilkins here wanting.)

IV. f. 88. Hen. Huntend. Prol. in Lib. de Summitatibus rerum.

V. f. 89b. Mirabilia Civitatis Romæ.

VI. f. 93. Gyraldi Cambrensis Expugnatio Hyberniæ.

Wants both Prologues, and from p. 779, line 10, to p. 781, line 3. (Ed. Camden) omits Ch. 26 B. 2 and ends p. 807, line 9. It seems however sometimes to have passages wanting in Camden.

VII. f. 124b. Vaticinatio quædam, ut videtur, metricè.

Very obscure, but the Hero appears to be Edward III. who is designated as a Bull.

VIII. f. 128b. Epistola?

Apparently a monitory and valedictory epistle. The writer states himself, a stranger to the Language of those to whom he addresses himself; and that he is about to leave the country, perhaps never to return.

IX. f. 131. Chronicon breve, metrice, a rege Ælfredo ad Henricum tertium, cujus temporibus scriptum est.

See No 1619 which was bought with it of Rodd

"Since the first edition of this work was printed off, several original documents relating to Whalley Abbey have come to light. The first of these is a thick octavo volume, entitled "Liber Loci Benedicti de Whalley," the contents of which are very miscellaneous. It seems to have been a kind of original register, or day-book, beginning with the translation of the Convent from Stanlaw and ending about the year 1346. The whole is extremely abbreviated and difficult to be read. The contents are MINUTES OF LEASES AND OTHER CONTRACTS, LETTERS, TABLES OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES, SERMONS AND POETRY. Extracts are then given from the letters relating to the government and discipline and also of the depravity of the Monastery." Dr. Whitaker then remarks "that the latter part of the Volume affords two curious Poetical Compositions of the earlier part of Edward the Third's time. The first is a sarcastic effusion of triumphant loyalty after the battle of Nevile's Cross, in the form of an Epistle from David Bruce to his friend Philip de Valoys, the second a whimsical copy of Macaronic Verses, a mixture of loyalty and discontent, proving the English Character to have been much the same in the 14th and 19th Centuries." "The Liber Loci also contains many Sermons which appear to have been preached in the Abbey Church. Among many other papers is a deed of sale of a Slave and his family, and the Hiring of a Servant for life. But the most remarkable circumstance in this volume is, that it contains the Runic Alphabet, together with some other contractions of which it does not appear how they came to the knowledge of the Monks, or what use they made of them."—Whitaker's Whalley, p. 114 and following.

 The third Portion of this most curious, interesting, and valuable MS. (purchased at Hazlewood's Sale in 1809) is thus described in Ellis's Specimens:

"Guernes, an ecclesiastic of Pont St. Maxence, in Picardy, wrote a metrical Life of Thomas a Becket; and from his anxiety to procure the most authentic information on the subject, came over to Canterbury in 1172. He states that having begun his work in France, he had been inaccurate in many of his facts, but that by conversing with persons who had known St. Thomas in private life, he had been enabled to correct many of his mistakes, and to make considerable progress in his poem, when his secretary robbed him of his manuscript; that this principally afflicted him from the fear that his name might be employed to cover untruths, and that purchasers might be deluded into buying an imperfect work; but that far from being discouraged by this unlucky robbery, he had redoubled his zeal for collecting materials, and had finally perfected his work in 1177. He further assures us, that he had more than once publickly read his poem at the tomb of the Archbishop; a proof (says M. de la Rue) that the romance tongue was, at this time, very generally understood in England. Perhaps, however, there never was a period when the town of Canterbury would not have furnished a sufficient audience for such an exhibition. This work of Guernes is written in stanzas of five Alexandrines, all ending with the same rhyme; a mode of composition which may possibly have been adopted for the purpose of being easily chanted.—Ellis's Specimens, vol. I. p. 56, 57.

History of Columbus and his Discoveries; Bernaldes was personally acquainted with Columbus, and had entertained him as his Guest in 1496, as he states in his 123rd chapter. This work was to have been published by Sancha, with his Collection of Spanish Chronicles; and there is no doubt but that this is the copy that was to have served for the purpose; Don Joseph Miguel de Flores, from whose heirs it was purchased, having been one of the Editors of those Chronicles. There is not perhaps a more generally interesting work than this among the whole series of Spanish historians, nor one more deserving of publication." Note from the Conde Catalogue.

The Bible, translated from the Vulgate into the Flemish or Low Dutch language, with a Gloss. Of the 15th Century, upon vellum, containing the five books of Moses, Joshua, Judges, Ruth, four Books of Kings, and Tobit; ornamented with an immense number of curious and brilliantly illuminated miniatures.

This translation from the Vulgate is undoubtedly one of the first that appeared in prose in a northern idiom. Portions of it were issued very early in the 14th century; consequently upwards of a hundred years before the invention of printing, and more than two centuries previous to Luther's new version. The text was ultimately adopted for the edition of the Bible printed at Delft in 1477.

88 . 4 . — 330 —— The Bible in Flemish Verse, called the Rym-Bibel, by Jacob van Maerlandt of Damme near Bruges, in Flanders. Of the 15th Century, upon Vellum, with ornamented capitals. This metrical version of the Scriptures was completed (according to an ancient copy of this MS.) in the year 1270. Excepting the Waldensian translation in the Provençal language, it is consequently the most ancient version in existence in a vernacular idiom, and must have preceded by a century those of Raoul de Presles, of John Trevisa, or the hermit of Hampole. This copy is imperfect at the end. Do.

 "Sir Julius Cæsar, descended by the female line from the Duke de Cesarini, in Italy, was Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, and one of the Masters of Requests in the Reign of Elizabeth. Upon the accession of James, he was knighted, and constituted Chancellor and Under Treasurer of the Exchequer, and in 1607 sworn of the Privy Council. He was not only one of the best Civilians of his time, but also one of the best men. His parts and industry rendered him an ornament to his profession, and his charity and benevolence an ornament to human nature. He died the 28th April, 1639." Granger's Biogr. Dict. Vol. I. p. 390.

"One thing worthy of observation is, that Dr. Julius Cæsar (afterwards Sir Julius) married to his first wife Dorcas Martyn, daughter of Sir R. Martyn, Master of the Mint in the Reigns of Q. Elizabeth and K. James, from whence we may conclude that the great number of inestimable papers relating to the Mint, which are to be found in this collection and perhaps no where else, is in a great measure owing to that union." A MOST VALUABLE AND SPLENDID CARTULARY, UPON VELLUM, IN THE FINEST PRESERVATION, in russia, from the Towneley Collection. This Abbey was founded in the reign of King Henry II. (1168) by Hubert Watts, then Dean of York. The scite of the Abbey and Lands came into possession of the Derham Family, and latterly of Sir Simeon Stuart, Bart. to whom this Chartulary belonged. See Blomefield's Norfolk, vol. IV. p, 87, but this MS. appears to have been unknown to him.

155. - - - 494 CHARTULARIUM. REGISTRUM ABBATIÆ BEATÆ MARIÆ EBORACENSIS. THIS MOST SPLENDID CARTULARY, UPON VELLUM, WAS WRITTEN PARTLY IN THE FOURTEENTH AND PARTLY IN THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY. It contains an account of all the possessions of the Abbey in York, London, &c., but is particularly valuable from the very minute details respecting the former city. In the Collectanea Topographica, Part VI. p. 113, it is erroneously ascribed to St. Peter's, York. In 2 vol. in russia, from the Towneley Collection. Payne for Sir T. P.

Very fine and valuable MS. of the end of the Fourteenth Century; in the original monastic binding, lettered on the side from Kemble's Collection. "This ancient Manuscript of The Canterbury Tales by Geoffrey Chaucer was given to me by the Right Honourable Lord William Gordon, 1808. J. P. Kemble," in a russia case. Thorpe Sir T. P.

16. 10. - 495*—— Of the XVth Century. A fine and valuable MS. of our first poet. The Cook's Tale is usually wanting in MSS. of an early date; but it is here found, with the exceptiou of between 40 and 50 introductory lines. Mr. Heber has annexed a list of the tales, and of the deficiencies of the volume, which are considerable, at the end. D. D.

— 17. - 496 —— Dream. This appears, as far as can now be ascertained, to be the very MS. Speght used when he, for the first time, printed what is correctly called Chaucer's Dream, in 1598. The addition to the title, "no doubte myssentituled, for this shoulde be Chaucer's Dreame, and his Dreame the Death of the Duchesse," is probably the handwriting of Speght. Br. Mus.

CONSISTS OF THE 24 CHESTER PAGEANTS, OR MIRACLE PLAYS, FOUNDED UPON THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS, and it is in the hand-writing of George Bellin, with the date of 1592, which is older than any other existing MS. of the same series of performance, excepting that in the possession of the Duke of Devonshire. George Bellin was also the penman of the most valuable of the two copies in the Museum (Harl. MS. 2013), which bears date in 1600, or eight years posterior to the present. There is not much variation between the two MSS. by Bellin excepting at the close of the 19th Play, but still one copy most materially supports and assists the other.

499 CHRONICA REGNI ANGLIÆ. Codex Membranaceus Sec. XIV. From the Towneley Collection; containing 43. 1. —

"1. Chronicon de Wigmore, ab A.D. 1066, ad A.D. 1307.

2. Chronicon a primis habitatoribus Britanniæ (scil. Albin) ad occisionem Jac. I. Regis Scotiæ, (scil. 1437.)

No. 1. has a list of the Abbots of Wigmore, descents of the family of Mortimer, and sometimes of their connections; and various notices of events of the Marches of Wales, &c. At the end is added an entry of A.D. 1382. The first page, which is almost obliterated, may be partly restored from MS. Cotton Cleopat. D. IX. 7, which to 1283 is nearly the same but scantier, and wanting the Wigmore notices. There is also a copy in Benet Coll. Library, Cambr. No. CCCCXXXIII. which by my notes seems nearly the same whether it have the Wigmore History I do not recollect. It ends 1294. This copy is often carelessly written. No. 2. Has been supposed to be compiled by John Shyrburne, I believe on no better authority than the name "Shyrburne" being written at the end of a copy in St. John's Lib. Oxon. There is another in the Museum Lansdown. 208." MS. note, in russia.

5 . 10 . . 505 Chronicle of England commonly called Caxton's Chronicle, very fine MS. of the Fifteenth Century upon vellum.

2 . 15 . . "This is by no means an uncommon work in MS. It sometimes occurs in French, in which it was most probably composed, as the MSS. in that language are older than those in English. In the Harleian Collection there is an English copy with an old note that ascribes the composition of it to one Douglas, a Monk of Glastonbury. The early part is a compilation from Geoffrey of Monmouth. D.

Caxton printed and continued it to his own time, whence the whole has been erroneously ascribed to him: at least it is usually called his Chronicle. It was likewise printed by Machlinia whose Edition I conceive to be anterior to that by Caxton.

The fructus temporum is the same work with additions to the beginning and end. On fi. 3 l. of sheet 16 (according to the pencil numeration) there begins an anonymous, and as far as I know an unnoticed CHRONICLE IN LATIN VERSE. The author a canon regular composed it under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost (here called Auctor principalis) when sick of a fever. It begins,

"Febribus infectus requies fuerat michi lectus."

It contains a period from 1346 to 1405, being divided into 4 parts, and the whole called a prophecy." Note by Mr. Douce.

– 8. 6 "This Fragment of the British and English Chronicle, beginning with Brute and ending with King H. Fifth, belonged to Mr. Henry Lowe the younger of Whittington Com. Derby, from him it came into the Family of Bulkeley of Whittington, and Mr. T. Bulkeley in Feb. 1773 gave it to me, Samuel Pegge. It was in a most shattered condition and I got it bound. It is imperfect both at beginning and ending, and might be written, as I conjecture by the hand, in the reign of Edw. IV. or Henry VII. most probably in that of Edward IV. I compared the account given of K. John's Death, p. 53, with the MS. English Chronicle and Caxton's printed Chronicle, both in Mr. Lewis's Life of Caxton, p. 133, also with my MS. English Chronicle, p. 197 and it agrees with none of these."—From Gough's Collection.

It is doubtless the original autograph of a very curious poem. The titlepage is dated 1600, but a passage in vol. ii. p. 215, shews that that part was not written until after the death of Prince Henry, in 1612.

 "This very valuable Manuscript presents us

WITH A FRENCH POEM OF SINGULAR CURIOSITY AND INTEREST. In folio 36, we learn that Gillion le Musit was born in 1272, became a Monk in 1289, and Abbot of St. Martin's at Tournay in 1331. At folio 238, he tells us that he lost his sight about 1348, but recovered it in 1351, by the aid of Maistre Jehan de Mience, who operated on his eyes with a silver needle, when he had attained his 80th year. He began to compose the contents of this volume during his blindness in 1350, and finished them in 1351. With the exception of an account of the Monastery of St. Martins and its usages, the whole is in Verse, generally in rhymed Quatrains, but sometimes in Couplets. "The Estates" to whom the Verses are addressed are occasionally introduced disputing with the Abbot, and are, of course, overpowered by his arguments. The Dialogue ends with a suitable admonition. Gillion's declamations are, as usual, on the depravity of his own times, and the virtues of former ages. He mentions and commends the Romant de la Rose (folio 33) and several authors of that period. THE ILLUMINATIONS AFFORD CURIOUS REPRESENTATIONS OF DRESSES, and always exhibit the Abbot and the persons who are the subject of his several Chapters." From Mr. Nicol's Collection.

D' 858 MARGARET. HERE BEGYNNES THE LYFE OF SAYNTE MARGARETE. UPON VELLUM of the Fifteenth Century. This work is mentioned in Warton's History of English Poetry. "Another Norman Saxon poem cited by the same industrious antiquary (Hickes) is entitled, The Life of Saint Margaret. The structure of its versification considerably differs from that in the last-mentioned piece, and is like the French Alexandrines. It appears to have been written about the time of the Crusades." Warton, vol. I. p. 13. The verses are not divided, but each couplet begins with a capital letter. The readings are different, as may be seen by comparison with the specimen given by Warton and the present: 7 - 17 - 6

D° 943 —— An Historical and Topographical Description of Ireland. This most interesting MS. was certainly drawn out from personal observation for the use and information of Government in Queen Elizabeth's reign. It commences with a General Map of Ireland and the four Provinces, very beautifully drawn in colours, with Treatises on Ireland, The causes of Decaie of Thinglish government in Ireland; the present state of the Country; next follows a detailed statement of the condition of each County under the following Titles: English Gent. of Discente, Mere Irish, Disordred Persons, Good Townes, Rivers, Havens, and Loughs. Under the three first heads are many most curious particulars; for instance, in the County of Leitrim, there is an account of the Faccons (Faccions), in which it is stated, "It is to be noted that Ochonner Don & Orwark have, in their several antiquities, bene Kinges of Ireland, therefore retayning the memorie of their former greatnes, they aspire & conspire with all leud disposed persons. In the county of Kerry among the Disordred persons, is placed the Knight of Kerry," &c. This MS. is beautifully written. 32. 11. —

This Compendium was formed out of the Annals kept there by the Bards, who noted down all the Events of the Country. The original Irish MS. is now (1774) at Cashell, and probably in the Archives of the Archbp. of Cashell, from whence this copy was taken by a poor man belonging to the County of Kerry, and presented to me by Arthur Blenerhassett, of Dover Street, Esq.  This romance was written by Raoul le Fevre, chaplain to Philip Duke of Burgundy, and the friend of Caxton, who printed a translation of it by himself. That magnificent prince did Raoul the honour of choosing scenes from it, to embellish his palace at Hesden, in French Flanders, of which Caxton thus makes mention in his prologue.

"But, well wote I, that the noble Duke Philip, did do maken a chamber in the castle of Hesdein, wherein, was craftily and curiously depainted, the conquest of the Golden Fleece, by the said Jason; in which chamber I have been, and seen the said history so depainted; and in remembrance of Medea, and of her cunning and science, he had do make in the same chamber, by subtil engine, that when he would, it should seem that it lightened, and after, thunder, snow and rain, and all within the said chamber, as oftimes, and when it should please him; which was all made for his singular pleasure."

63 962 JUAN ALFONSO DE BAENA CANCIONERO. Jackson.

 This extraordinary Manuscript was written about the middle of the XVth Century for the Amusement of King Don John IInd. and was considered as one of the treasures of the Escurial. It is described by N. Antonio, Tom. 2, p. 251, Bibl Vetus, and Velasquez, p. 53; but the most particular account of its contents is in the Bibliotheca Espanola of Joseph Rodriguez de Castro, vol. 1, p. 265, from which the following translation is taken.

"In the beginning of this Century (Cent. XV.) was born a Jew, named Baena, who abjured his errors and professed the Christian Faith, taking in holy baptism the names of Juan Alfonso. He was amanuensis to King D. Juan IInd. and displayed his taste in Poetry, and particular knowledge in the gentle craft, or art of the Troubadours, by the Collection which he presented to the King of all the reliques which he could collect of the ancient Spanish Troubadours; among which he inserted various poems of his own contemporaries, some of which were composed by himself and one of his brothers, and some which held in contempt certain superstitions of the Jews.

The greater number of Specimens in this collection are from Christian Troubadours, and ought perhaps to have been reserved for a more suitable place than the work of a Jewish Convert; but as it contains several Jewish, and many Christian Poems little or not at all known, and as it is a most copious Collection, which proves the affection of the Spaniards of that age, and of those which preceded it to this class of Poetry, and also on account of the elegance and spirit of the language (for those times), the subtile conceptions of its Authors, and the different historical notices by no means common; it appears to us advisable to give an account of all the articles, taking entire the shortest specimens of Baena and his brother, and of those which relate to the Rabbis, but of those to the Christians, giving only their titles, and first and last stanzas, because of them and of their merit we may discourse when we treat of their respective authors: leaving the curiosity of the erudite satisfied for the present by this anticipated notice, and by selecting a specimen of the variety and elegance of its metres."

"This collection is in MS. in the Royal Library of San Lorenzo in the Escurial, being j. h. 5, in a large folio volume of 202 leaves, on paper, in beautiful writing of the XVth Century, with some abbreviations and corrections in different parts; with the title page, heads of the chapters and initials incorporated. It possesses an Index, made by the same Baena, which being incomplete, this Catalogue was formed of those Troubadours whose poetry appears in this Collection." The List of names follows on pages 266. The following is a translation of Baena's own preface, with which the volume begins.

"Unicuique gracia est data: secundum paulum relata.

Here commences the very remarkable and famous book, founded on the most elegant and subtle art of poetry and gentle craft (gaya sciencia). In which book are written, collected, and arranged all the songs most sweet and charmingly attuned to many and divers arts; and all the questions on many ingenious inventions stated and answered, and all other most exquisite sayings, much polished and well versified, and all those most charming and profound processos e Requestas which in all past times until now were made and arranged and composed and versified by that polished and famous poet and patron of the said art, Alfonso Alvares de Villasandino, and all those other poets, Brethren in Monasteries, Masters in Theology, and Knights and Squires, and many more, and various learned persons who were and are the greatest minstrels, (desidores, jongleurs) and men the most discreet and well-informed in the said graceful art of these poets and minstrels. In this book, therefore, according to their order, will be found the names and works of each of them, and it extends also to the relation of the favor, aid, blessing, and strengthening with which our Lord fiso, e ordeno, e conpusso, e acopilo, the Rabbi Johan Alfonso de Baena, the scribe and servant of the most high and most noble King of Castille Don John our Lord, with much toil and labour, and with much diligence and affection and great anxiety, to please and recreate and enliven and serve his Royal Highness and Grand Signor. For without doubt if his Grace, in this said book, would read at his time of life, he will receive delight, merriment and recreation, with the many bland, pleasant, sprightly and entertaining things therein contained; and this redoubtable royal person will have repose and tranquillity from fatigues, troubles and annoyances; will lay aside and forget and withdraw from the weight of thought, melancholy and affliction which so often burthen, weigh down and distress princes in their many and arduous negociations. In the same manner will be delighted her royal highness the high, most noble and most enlightened Queen of Castile, Donna Maria, our Lady his wife, and the Duennas and young Ladies of her house; also delighted and enchanted with this said book will be the most illustrious, most gracious, and most generous Prince Don Enrique, his son, and finally in general will be delighted with this book all the Grandees of this Kingdom, and those pearls of Infantas, and Dukes, Counts, Governors, Admirals, Grand Masters, Marshalls, Doctors, and Esquires and all other Gentlemen, with the ladies, attendants and official persons of his Royal Household will much demand to read, and to hear read, and to understand this work. And that this so famous book should be more agreeable and better understood by hearers and readers, it was ordered and fixed by the said Johan Alfonso da Baena that at the commencement of this work should be a prologue or harangue, and as a foundation and root of the whole work, it is here commenced. Johannes Baennensis homo; vocatur in sua domo.

In this prologue Baena, after recommending the study of ancient history and chronicles, and extolling their utility for Kings, Princes and Nobles, defines thus the Art of the Troubadours, "As it is certain and notorious that among all rare and worthy writings in the world which were written and arranged, and made and composed, by wise and discreet Authors, Masters and Compilers, the art of poetry and gentle craft is a writing and composicion most curious, artful and graceful," &c. &c.

Antonio also, in his Bibl. Hisp. Vetus, Tom. 2, p. 251, says, Pervellem equidem nobiliorum Poetarum carmina aut saltem unius et alterius eorum gustum sistere: cum ut Poeticam singulorum indolem internoscere liceret, tum ut metri genus, obsoletaque patrii sermonis vocabula nostratium aures arrigerent ac titillarent. Quando autem id exequi non vacat, unum moneo collectionem hanc uberrimam atque omnium quæ circumferuntur, antiquissimam esse: Neque exiguum operæ pretium facturum quicumque eam non perfunctorie legerit. In his enim poematiis præter eorum elegantiam, nativamque patrii sermonis copiam, bona forsan ævi quo scripta fuerunt historiæ pars graphice depingitur. Nimirum his verborum involucris ac τοῖς αἰνίγμασι Poetæ animi sensa, quæ alias propalare tutum minime foret, includere amant.

With the exception of the few selections made by De Castro, no portion of this Cancionero has ever been printed, and no copy of it is known to exist. It is quite certain that A MORE CURIOUS OR MORE INTRINSICALLY VALUABLE WORK OF THIS DESCRIPTION WAS NEVER OFFERED AT A PUBLIC SALE.

In green morocco by Lewis. Two leaves and a portion of a third are wanting, but these were also deficient when De Castro wrote his account. From the Conde Library.

"Except the copy at the Museum (Bib. Reg. 13. D. II.) it is the only one which has hitherto occurred of what appears to be the Author's latest Edition. It is not however a transcript of that MS., as in some unimportant variations it agrees with the other copies.

The Epistle to Robert Earl of Gloucester precedes the Fourth Book as is usually the case. It is mutilated at the third leaf from the end, and wants from "cujus concilii," fol. 105 b. l. 26, to "ea multa," fol. 109 b. line 48 (Ed. London). At the end it has the readings of both editions run into one: and there are marks of an erasure which seem to shew that this was done, after the transcript was completed, to supply what some one considered an omission.

There are some trifling verbal alterations and omissions, not generally for the better, and perhaps arising from carelessness in the scribe. The hand seems of the 14th Century. The initials have been filled up long since the MS. was written." (See MS. Note.)

III. Susanne and Danyell.

The author of this last Poem is thus mentioned in Wintoun's Chronicle.

> "And men of gud dyscretyowne
> Suld excuse and love Huchowne
> Dat cummand wes in Literature,
> He made the gret Gest of Arthure,
> And the Awntyne of Gawane,
> De Pystyl als of Swete Susane:
> He wes curyws in hys style
> Fayre of Facund and subtile.
> And ay to Plesans and Delyte,
> Mad in Metyne mete his Dyte.
> Wyntoun's Chronicle, B. V. c. XII. v. 301.
> Clerk of Tranent eik he has tane
> That made the aventers of Sir Gawane.

See Dunbar's Lament for the Death of the Makharis, in Lord Hailes's Edition of the Bannatyne Poems, p. 76. The two ancient Metrical Romances in the Scottish Dialect, published in Pinkerton's Scottish Poems, 1792, Gawan and Gologras, and Sir Gawan, and Sir Gallaron of Galloway, both of which exhibit the union of the old alliterative metre, with rhyme, &c.; in the termination of each stanza the short triplet of the Tournament of Totenham are judged to be as old as the time of our K. Henry VI. being apparently the production of an Old Poet, mentioned by Dunbar in his Lament. In this conjecture I cannot but think Percy right, though Lord Hailes in his note to the couplet above quoted from the Bannatyne Poems (p. 271), inclines to think from the spelling, that the Romances alluded to by Percy were composed by Englishmen, so that in all probability the work of Clerk is lost. The orthography, which might depend on the transcriber or printer, is not to be very much rested upon, especially when the poem (or pistell) of "Susanne," is here forthcoming, written in almost precisely the same extraordinary measure, and with the same forced and persevering system of alliteration. Wyntoun records the principal productions of his contemporary bard and friend Huchone, styled by Dunbar Clerk of Tranent, to have written besides his "Gest Imperiall, the great gest of Arthur, the adventures of Gawan, and the Pistell of Swete Susanne." The two latter have at length occurred, both written in style exactly similar to each other, and very marked and peculiar. Add to this the resemblance of the old Scotish Poem of Houlat, as is well observed by Pinkerton in the Preliminaries to his Scotish Poems, vol I. p. 23, and little doubt can remain that the present poem of Susanne is the curious and long lost pistell of Hucheon, Clarke of Tranent—perhaps the only surviving copy." Note by Mr. Heber.

1089 POETRY. THE LIVES OF THE SAINTS. A very ancient MS. probably of the end of the XIIIth Century, upon vellum, containing the Lives of the Saints, in Old English Rime. Mr. Heber has drawn out a list of the Contents, and says, that the "Extracts in Warton from St. Walstan, St. Patrick, Thos. a Becket, correspond tolerably closely. Hearne, at p. 670 of his Glossary to Langtoft, quotes St. Brandon's life in the Sheldon MS. Lives of the Saints, but it does not occur here." At the end of the volume is a singular poem upon Usury, and other pieces. A very valuable MS. purchased at Mess. Sotheby's in 1822, in old russia. 05. 1. —

1092 —— A Collection of Ballads, Songs, and other Poems, together with the Arraignments of the Earl and Countess of Somerset, Mrs. Turner, Sir E. But few of these have been published.

D°. 1093 —— A volume of Poems by J. Champernone, Davenant, &c.; which also contains on fol. 69 et seq. Alex. Gill's abusive lines on Ben Jonson, which Gifford printed imperfectly from a MS. in the Ashmolean Collection at Oxford. Vide the end of the Magnetic Lady. Also two answers to them, one by Zouch Towneley, the other certainly by Ben Jonson himself, although without a signature. — 12. —

1. 1. — 1094 POETRY. Miscellanies, or a Collection of Divers Witty and Pleasant Epigrams, Adages, Poems, Epitaphs, &c. for the recreation of the overtravelled senses, 1630. Rodd

A highly interesting and valuable miscellany of published and unpublished poetry, including Shakespeare's Epitaph upon John-a-Combe, some of his Sonnets, pieces by Ben Jonson, Sir W. Raleigh, Bp. Corbet, Sir John Harrington, H. Parrot, F. Simpson, W. Stroud, and many others, most of them anonymous, and produced between or about 1590 and 1640. The first part of the vol. is filled with satires and poems on women, the rest is miscellaneous.

5. 7. 6 — 8. — 1095 —— A volume of political and Scandalous Miscellanies, with quite as much slander as wit, of the reigns of Charles II. and James II. Thorpe

6. 12. — 1096 —— An Heroic Poem on the events of the Civil wars, by George Cartwright, no doubt the same person who wrote the play of the Heroic Lover. This piece was obviously intended for publication, but was never printed. Payne for Sir T. P.

— 5. — 1097 —— The praise of England and its Inhabitants, by Christopher Angell, a Greek, who was persecuted by the Turks for his religion. Dated 1617. D° D°

1. 1. — 1098 —— A Miscellany, containing Poems by nearly all the Poets flourishing in the reigns of James I. and Charles I. including a satirical attack upon Ben Jonson, which have not been published, and many others found only in the MSS. of the time. At the end of the vol. and by a much more modern hand, is a MS. of the rare Interlude of Nice Wanton, and copies of some other very rare productions of our early press. Thorpe

2. 2. — 1099 —— A Poetical Miscellany, extending through the years 1643-4-5-6-7-8-9, 1650-1-2. Some of them appear to have been published, and not a few set to music by different composers of the time, whose initials are given; several of the poems are on the birth and baptismal days of the writer. Rodd

— 1. — 1100 —— A Collection of Poems, imperfect at both ends, but containing several curious pieces by Allabaster, Freeman (the Epigrammatist), Dr. King, Bp. Corbet, Randolph, Robert Thompson, Ben Jonson, &c. most, if not all, of which have been printed. D°

Rodd 1102 POETRY. A collection of Poems, chiefly political, of the reign of Charles II. The fly-leaf has the name of Samuel Danvers, 1661, which may be the date when the volume was commenced; but many of the poems are considerably more modern. From Brand's Collection. — 18.— — 12.—

D° 1103 —— A volume of Miscellanies from Rochester, Dorset, Cleveland, and others. At the other end of the volume, are a number of Physical Receipts. — 1.—

Thorpe 1104 —— Poetical Miscellany, selected from the Works of the Men of Genius of the XVIIth Century. 1. 2.—

The first part of this volume was obviously collected by a Scotchman, and it includes pieces by Ben Jonson, Wither, Dr. Donne, &c. It must have been made in the latter part of the reign of Charles I. 6.10.—

The second portion of the volume is a later production; a humorous poem, called a Whigs Supplication, by S. C., in which there is a remarkable notice of Cleveland, Donne, and "Bass divine." The latter name somebody has ignorantly altered, not knowing probably who "Bass divine" was. The poem is an imitation of Hudibras, both in style and metre. In russia, from Pinkerton's Collection.

Rodd 1105 —— A Collection of Poems on several occasions, written about 1680. From Sir J. Sebright's Collection. — 5.— — 1.—

D° 1106 —— A volume of Poems by Rochester, Dryden, Waller, &c. From the Collection of the Chevalier d'Eon. — 4.—

Payne 1107 —— This Miscellany consists of many curious pieces, private and political; some of them of the very coarsest kind. Not a few relate to the poets of the time of Charles II., including Dryden, Otway, Lee, Shadwell, Settle, as well as the wits Sir C. Sedley and Sir G. Etherege. The actors Betterton, Smith, Underhill, Goodman, Jevern, Sparks, Mrs. Barry, Mrs. Butler, &c. also come in for their share of satire and abuse. In blue morocco. for Sir J. S. 2.19.— 5.—

Rodd 1108 —— A volume of various Poems, by Carew, Randolph, Quarles, Dr. H. King, &c. written about 1636. — 3.—

D° 1110 —— Pamphilia to Amphilanthus, from Reed's Collection. See Reed's Cat., No. 8684. "Pamphilia to Amphilanthus consists of Sonnets, Madrigals, and Miscellaneous Poems, all on the subject of Love. They are written very much in imitation of Constable and Daniell." In blue morocco. 6.6.— 1.5.—

1314 PHILIPPINE ISLANDS. A MOST VALUABLE SERIES OF AUTHENTIC DOCUMENTS, STATE PAPERS, MEMORIALS, &c. BOTH PRINTED AND MANUSCRIPT, RELATIVE TO THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, MADE BY DALRYMPLE DURING HIS STAY AT MANILLA. This very important Collection is thus mentioned by him in his Introduction to the Voyages and Discoveries of the South Pacific Ocean. "Very fortunately he obtained a curious collection of Spanish Memorials; these greatly elucidate the printed relations, which without this assistance must have remained unintelligible." Admiral Burney also in his Introduction to the Voyages and Discoveries in the South Sea, says "To Mr. Dalrymple I have been greatly indebted for assistance. From his large collection I have been furnished with several original accounts of Spanish discoveries, which I had no other means of procuring." This series consists of 31 volumes, (several written in the Dialect of the Country) and includes—

1. 1. – 1321 —— The Faithful Friends, by Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher. Thorpe

21. –. –

This play, the Faithful Friends, was entered on the Stationers' Books June 29, 1660, but it was perhaps written thirty or forty years before that date though never printed. An Account of the MS. is given in the Gent. Mag. Vol. 80, p. 321. It was then the property of the Rev. H. Kett, whose name is upon the title-page. Mr. Kett states that "Mr. John Kemble, who has read several parts of it, agrees with me in opinion that it is an undoubted production of Beaumont and Fletcher."

Rodd 1323 Plays. The Governor, A Tragi Comedy, 1656. This play is one of the very few which Warburton's Servant spared. It is to be regretted that instead of being by Sir Corn. Rodd 1325 —— Timon of Athens. This play is curious, because, in all probability, it preceded Shakspeare's Timon, and it shews the improvements our great dramatist made in what may be considered his original. Thorpe 1336 —— HARRINGTON MS. A HIGHLY CURIOUS AND VALUABLE MS., CONTAINING UNPUBLISHED POEMS BY SURREY, AND ALSO SEVERAL BY AUTHORS HITHERTO UNKNOWN. Bishop Percy has inferred upon examination, "that it was evidently part of the series of poetical MSS. collected by the Haringtons." It was bought at the sale of the Library of the Rev. W. Sayle, by T. Park, who has printed a few of the Poems in the last Edition of the Nugæ Antiquæ. 11. — . —

D° 1337 —— A Collection of Miscellaneous Poems, in 2 vol. From Boucher's and Malone's Collections, in blue morocco. 2. 7. —

These two volumes contain a great deal of singular and amusing matter, some, but only a comparatively small part, of which has been printed in the State Poems. The rest seems derived from broadsides, &c. published at the time but never collected. Malone made great use of this source of information in his Life of Dryden, but it contains a great deal regarding other poets of that day which he did not apply.

D° 1338 —— A Collection of Poems of various descriptions, written, as appears from the contents, by a banished papist, prior to the death of James I. Most of them are of a religious tendency, but others on lighter subjects, as for instance an Epigram where a woman is asked by a Minister whether she had ever strictly kept any one of the 10 Commandments and she replied, to his great surprise, boldly in the affirmative—when asked which of the ten it was, she answered that she had never coveted her neighbour's wife. — 10. 6

Rodd 1339 —— A Volume which appears to be a Polemical Poem like that printed in 1602 under the title of "An Answere to a Romish Rime," &c. by I. R. only with a tendency directly the reverse, the Protestant making the "Complaint," and the Catholic the "Answer." It does not seem to have been printed though clearly intended for publication. — 1. —

D° 1360 PROMPTORIUM PARVULORUM, SIVE CLERICORUM. 7. — . —

This exceedingly interesting and valuable work, which has not hitherto been sufficiently consulted by the Glossarists and Lexicographers, may be considered as affording the most important materials for the elucidation of the early history of our Language; being the FIRST ENGLISH AND LATIN DICTIONARY. It appears from the prologue to have been compiled by a Friar preacher of Lynn in Norfolk, and to afford a correct specimen of the language then current in East Anglia. He thus speaks of himself and his language. "Unde ego dictus indignus frater predicatorum Lenum sub regula paupertatis astrictus, &c. Comitatus tamen Norfolchie, modum loquendi sum solum, sequtus, quem solum ab infantia didici et soletenus plenus perfectiusque cognovi." In a copy of the work that had been lent to Thomas Hearne, the following note was written in an old hand: "Nomen compilatoris hujus libri est frater Ricardus Fraunces inter quatuor parietes pro Christo inclusus." The work was first printed in 1499 and there are several subsequent editions, but the printed copies are less copious than the MSS., and the MSS. copies vary in their orthography and other particulars. This Manuscript has a second part intitled Medulla Grammatice in which the Latin words precede the English, and may have formed the foundation of the Ortus Vocabulorum, a work sometimes accompanying the Promptorium in the printed copies. This second part is imperfect extending only to part of the letter T.

2. 6. — 1385 Robert the Devil. Here begynneth the Lyfe of Robert the Devyll. With curious drawings. From Brand's Sale. Thorpe

 "This MS. of Robert the Devil appears to have been transcribed, word for word, from an edition in 4to., printed either by Wynkyn de Worde or Pynson, of which I have a fragment consisting of six leaves; these I have collated with the MS." 4. 18. — Sir T. P.

"No mention is made of this edition in Mr. Herbert's Typographical Antiquities, nor have I ever seen a complete copy or heard of one. It is probable that the impression was destroyed in the fire of London. There are no cuts in the fragment. The drawings in the MS. seem to be of the time of Elizabeth or James I."—Note by Mr. Douce.

et les autres en or et en couleurs. LES MANUSCRITS D'ANCIENNES POESIES FRANCOISES SONT EXTREMEMENT RARES." Catalogue de Mac Carthy, No. 2809. The date of 1354 is affixed to a Privilege, granting the freedom of Mantua to Jac. de pamellis de Godio by the Emperor Charles, dated from Keisersberg, and inserted in the volume, but not relating to it. This most precious MS. contains poems by the following Troubadours: Arnaud de Marueil, Vidal de Bezaudun, Comte de Poitiers, Comtesse de Die, Z. de Porcairagues, P. Raimond de Toulouse, Pierre d'Auvergne, Elias Cairel, Marcabrus, Arnauld Daniel (celebrated by Dante, Versi d'amori e prose di romanzi soverchio tutti, Petrarch & Pulci;) Bernard Laventador, Bertram del Borgn, &c. Mr. Raynouard, in his Choix des Poesies des Troubadours, speaking of Le Comte de Poitiers, says, "Le Comte de Poitiers, ce troubadour etant le plus ancien de tous ceux dont les ouvrages sont parvenus jusqu'a nous il a paru convenable d'en extraire les fragments qui peuvent donner une idee de l'etat de la langue et de la poesie de l'epoque ou il a ecrit." He then mentions a particular passage which occurs only in the Mac Carthy MS. A letter from Mr. Raynouard to Mr. Cohen (Sir Francis Palgrave), and Observations on this MS. of Mac Carthy by Mr. Raynouard, are inserted. In red morocco, with borders of gold.

"Our forefathers reduced hunting to a science, and have left large treatises on this species of diversion, which was so connected with their state of life and manners. The most curious one I know is, or was, lately among the manuscripts of Mr. Fermor, of Tusmore, in Oxfordshire. It is entitled Le Art de Venerie, le quel maistre Guillaume Twici venour le roi d'Angleterre fist en son temps per aprandre autres. This master William Twici was grand huntsman to Edward the Second. In the Cotton Library this book occurs in English under the names of William Twety and John Giffard, most probably a translation from the French copy, with the title of a "*book of Venerie dialogue wise. It is here said that the adventures del S. Graal, as seen and related by Boor, were placed and kept in the Abbey of Salisbury . . . . .

" Gautier Map lived in the Reign of Henry II. surnamed Plantagenet, King of England, and received the command from this Monarch, as he himself says, to translate the Romance of Lancelot du Lac, from Latin into French. This translation is not mentioned in the Catalogue of his works, published by Fabricius and Tanner. The latter makes him Canon of Salisbury, Grand-Chantre of Lincoln in 1196, and Archdeacon of Oxford in 1198. The year of his death is unknown, but he was alive in 1210.

Chrestien de Troyes put into rhime, about 1190, the Roman du Lancelot de Lac with the title of Charette. He did not finish it, but it was continued some years after by Geoffroy de Ligny or de Lagny." See the description of these volumes in the La Valliere Catalogue by Mr. Van Praet.

"Among other particularities in the Prologue it is stated that Jean Vaillant of Poictiers abridged this Romance in 1391, in the form we now have it by the command of Pierre Le Sant Escuyer et Conseiller du Roy de France, et de Sire Loys Duc de Bourbon probably Louis II. I. ROMAN DU ROI WALDEF.

A Romance in French Verse, consisting of about

Digitized by Google

Twenty-two thousand lines, incomplete at the end. The outline of the Story is as follows,—

" Britain after the expulsion of the Romans was divided into many kingdoms. One of these kingdoms was governed by Atle, who built Atleborough. King Bede, a descendant of Atle, had a sister named Odenild, beloved by a nobleman of a neighbouring kingdom, who, while visiting her privately, was murdered by the son of Frode the king's Seneschal, leaving Odenild pregnant. When Odenild was secretly delivered of a male child, her attendant exposed it: and being found by one of the king's followers he adopted the infant and called him Florenz. Bede some time after married the daughter of Morgan King of Neustria, by whom he had a son named Waldef. On the death of Bede, Frode the Seneschal usurped the kingdom, and endeavoured to destroy the child Waldef: but he was preserved by Florenz, who finally killed Frode and established Waldef on his paternal throne. Waldef after defeating the several neighbouring kings, married Ernilda, by whom he had two sons Giac and Guthlac. A band of Saracens stole away his queen and children, but, after many adventures, they were restored to him, when the children had attained to manhood. After a time the young princes determined to seek their fortunes in Germany, where Giac overcame the Emperor. During their absence Waldef was surprised and killed by Brand at Rochester, on learning which Giac renounced the World, and Guthlac returning to England to avenge his father's death, engaged Hunewald a Gigantic Dane.—Here it ends.

The best parts of the Tale are the Episodes of the emperor's Daughter (f. 109) and of his Nephew, (f. 120). There is no supernatural intervention except the vision of the Angel: Faerie is mentioned incidentally in one or two places, as are Rings which rendered the wearer invulnerable.

The writer seems well acquainted with the geography of England, (noting especially many places in Norfolk); and generally of Europe.

In the Library of C. C. C. Cambridge, N°. 329, 1, is a Latin MS. Version of a Life of Waldef by John Bramas, a Monk of Thetford, who says it was first composed in English and afterwards turned into French verse for a Lady who did not understand English.

The present copy seems to have been written about the latter end of the XIIIth Century: the folios 4, 6 and 125 are misplaced.

Payne for Archd Butler 1523 Sidney, Earl of Leicester. Memorial presented to the Earl of Leicester, Brother of Sir P. Sidney, 10 . 10 . —
PART XI. DAY 9. Folio.

BY THOMAS NEVITT, who had been in his and his father's service 35 years. This most curious document contains a detailed account of all the Revenue and Expences of the Earl and his Family, and commences in the following manner,—" Right honorable some ffower yeares ago your honor was pleased to tell Mr. Golding and myself that you would make a declaration of the estate left you, and which hath accrued any way unto you since your ffathers death, and of your expences, whereby the world might see that you have not only brought honor unto your house and posteritie, but also enlarged your revenue, which hath induced me, although very unfit, to make the declaration ensuing. Which, although it be very imperfect, in respect many things might passe without my knowledge, yett it will give great light unto your honour in that work, which I do earnestly desire may be perfected for the satisfaction of your good friends."

A Copy from this MS. (wch belonged to Dr Farmer) is among Cole's MSS. in the Br. Museum

" About the year 84 your noble father departed this life, and immediately after it pleased God to take out of this life your noble brother Sir Phillipp Sidney, whose Executors, viz. the now Lady Clanrickard, and Sir F. Walsingham, caried away in behalf of the heire generall all the goods and moveables at Penshurst, as plate, Jewells, and houshould stuffe to the value of 20,000, as I have been informed, besides the Manor of Robertsbridge and Maldon, which were worth 1200 per annum, besides the benefit of the sale of much timber, which, with the rents and fines in the thirty yeares the Countess of Clanrickard and the Earl of Rutland enjoyed it could not amount unto lesse than 40,000," &c. &c. The writer was Master of the Robes to the Earl, and this memorial is a vindication of his honesty, and a call upon the Earl to reward his long services. On paper, very neatly written, and bound in vellum.

This MS. afterwards purchased by Archd. Butler (Bp. of Lichfd) and printed by him for the Roxburgh Club. Now, 1842, in B.M.

 "This very curious Metrical Romance formerly belonged to Dr. Farmer, at whose sale it was purchased by G. Steevens. It is written upon parchment, and is of considerable antiquity. The Sowdon of Babylon, and his Son Ferumbras, formerly enjoyed a high reputation among the Lovers of Legendary Lore. Mr. Ritson (in a manuscript note at the beginning of the volume), traces an allusion to this Romance in the Metrical History of Bruce; and Mr. Gilchrist refers to one in the works of Sir David Lyndsay, and thinks it is designated in the Romance of Richard Cœur de Lion. There is a plain allusion to it in Skelton's "Ware the Hawke." This unpublished Metrical Romance is highly deserving the attention of Collectors of early English Poetry." Gilchrist's Catalogue.

SUR VELIN. A VERY ANCIENT MS. WRITTEN UPON DOUBLE COLUMNS, AND CONTAINING 266 LEAVES. It is a different composition from the Roman de Troye, written by Benoist de Sainct More, as appears by the following extract from Warton's History of Poetry:

" On the Trojan story, the French have an ancient poem, at least not posterior to the 13th century, entitled Roman de Troye, written by Benoist de Sainct More. As this author appears not to have been known to the accurate Fauchet, nor la Croix du Maine; I will cite the exordium, especially as it records his name, and implies that the piece was translated from the Latin, and that the subject was not then common in French:

This MS. contains also the Roman de Thebes.

" He mentions his own name again in the body of the work, and at the end.

" Ducange mentions a Metrical MS. romance on this subject, by Jacques Millet, entitled De la Destruction de Troie."—Warton, Hist. of E. P. vol. I. 140.

Phelippe par la Grace de Dieu Duc de Bourgogne. Du XV. Siecle; written in a large character. From the Towneley Collection.

1656 Turpin's (Archbp of Rheims) Chronicle of Charlemagne and his twelve champions; of Roland and his sword, called Durndart, his magical horn, Olifant, &c. In ancient German, containing 90 leaves.

Colophon:—"Per me Andream Endras genant Küsslin. Inwangen Anno Domini M°CCCC°XIX. is geendet und uszgeschriben disz libel. An dem zwölften tag des aberellen."

Like its predecessors, Tyturell, Parcifal and Lohengrin, translated from the provençal tongue by Wolfram von Eschenbach, the present chronicle, of the exploits of Charlemagne and his twelve peers, has probably been done into ancient German rhymes from a French romaunt, having some such title as "Ci comence l'Estoire que Turpin le Ercevesque de Reins fit del bon roy Charlemagne coment il conquist Espagne, e delivera des Paens."

Arthur and Charlemagne are the first and original heroes of romance. And as Geoffrey's history is the grand repository of the acts of Arthur, so a fabulous history ascribed to Turpin is the groundwork of all the chimerical legends which have been related concerning the conquests of Charlemagne and his twelve peers. Its subject is the expulsion of the Saracens from Spain, &c.

Charlemagne, Rowland and Oliver were chaunted at the battle of Hastings.

A very curious description of Gaileon's sword Duransard is to be found in the romance of "La plaisante et delectable Histoire de Gerileon d'Angleterre," Paris, 1572.

In the British Museum there is an old French manuscript containing the history of Charlemagne, translated into prose from Turpin's latin. The writer declares that he preferred a sober prose translation of this authentic historian, as histories in rhyme, undoubtedly very numerous on this subject, looked so much like lies! "Nuz contes rymez n'en est vrais: tot mensonge ce qu'ils dient." His title is extremely curious, "Ci comence l'Estoire que Turpin le Ercevesque de Reins fit del bon roy Charlemayne coment il conquist Espagne, e delivera des Paens. Et pur ceo qe Estoire rimée semble mensunge, est ceste mis in prose, solun le Latin qe Turpin mesmes fist, tut ensi cume il le vist et vist."

M. Falconet, an ingenious inquirer into the early literature of France, is of opinion, that the most ancient romances, such as that of the Round Table, were first written in

Digitized by Google

Latin prose: it being well known that Turpin's Charlemagne, as it is now extant, was originally composed in that language. He thinks they were translated into French rhymes, and at last into French prose, tels que nous les avons aujourd' hui.

It is a proof of the decay of invention among the French in the beginning of the XIVth Century, that about that period they began to translate into prose their old metrical romances, such as the fables of King Arthur, of Charlemagne, &c.

21 n - - 1697 YRIARTE. COLECCION DE REFRANES CASTELLANOS. "DON Juan de Yriarte had a particular predilection for collecting and preserving all the popular proverbs, which he heard in conversation or met with in Authors, citing always the person whom he heard pronounce them although of the lowest class of society: and often paying his servants a certain sum for each proverb they brought him which was not already among those he had collected. In this manner he procured the exorbitant quantity of from 25 to 30,000." Elogio de D. Juan de Yriarte. Thorpe for Sir T. Pl.

 This is one of the oldest manuscripts which have come down to these times, and its value is much increased by the important testimonies to its antiquity which are here subjoined.

It came from the Monastery of Ottenbeuren, near Memmingen, and is mentioned by Mabillon in his Iter Germanicum as perantiquum, and is also described, in the following terms, by D. Martinus Gerbert, Princeps et Abbas ad S. Blasium in Sylva Nigra, in his Iter Alamannicum. "Inter MSS. quæ rapaces vicinorum æmulorum manus aliasque temporum injurias effugerunt, antiquissimum, annos fundationis Monast. Ottenbeuren (Anno Domini 764) adæquare prope videtur, characteribus mixtis Merovingico-Carolingicis exaratum, cum hac epigraphe. In nomine Domini nostri Jesu Christi incipit Omelias anni circuli, quæ legendæ sunt: item de adventum (sic) *et de nativitate Dñi, de Epiphanie, de Quadragesima, sive de pascha Dñi, sive de ascensu Dñi, seu de Pentecoste. Maria, Inventio S. Michælis, Id est de Inventione Ecclesiæ seu Apparitione S. Michælis archangelio. In fine Horologium est quomodo dimensione umbræ corporis humani stata horarum canonicarum tempora per diem et annum tunc designarunt. The following account also of this MS. is translated from Schelhorn's Guide to Librarians and Archivists, p. 274:—

"The Merovingian character is remarkable for the rudeness of its form. It is difficult to decypher, and can only be read with the utmost pains and attention. Certain letters, such as A, r, m, n, have something peculiar, which shews them to be Merovingian. The perpendicular ones all rise far above the line; whilst the others, going under or over it, have a very unseemly appearance, though they help to devine and lead to the correct reading. History is silent, as far as I recollect, as to what period Codices in this style of writing belong. The Carlovingian character, which is a perceptible refinement upon it, did not appear all at once, as may naturally be supposed, in its most improved form. In its origin, it was mixed with the Merovingian. AND SUCH IS THE INESTIMABLE MS. HORARIUM AT OTTOBEUREN, WHICH, THOUGH EVIDENTLY WRITTEN IN THIS MIXED CHARACTER, BELONGS MOST CERTAINLY TO THE FIRST HALF OF THE EIGHTH CENTURY. I have examined it with two scholars particularly versed in diplomatic writings and ancient manuscripts, and the celebrated Benedictin P. Beda Mayer, who then, if my memory does not deceive me, assigned to it the same age I have just indicated." In fine preservation, and in the original vellum binding.

VIII. Fabliau, 4 leaves.

 This is an exceedingly curious Recueil of Norman metrical romances, and some idea may be formed of their excessive rarity when it is known that, 20 years ago, L'Abbé De la Rue made diligent search for the FIRST POEM of the collection, being aware of its existence, without being able to obtain any traces of it. The subject is a monastic account of the founding of "li gliese seint michiel," with the visions and miracles of its founder Albert, bishop of Avranches, in the reign of Childebert.

St. Michael's Mount, situated on the coast of Normandy, near to the city of Avranches, is called Tombelaine; and Geoffrey of Monmouth says the place was called Tomba Helenæ.

But an extract from the proeme of this probably unique romance will give a more familiar idea of its style and contents:—
